A R T I C L E   I N F O

We are pleased to announce the inaugural issue to mark the beginning of the Nursearcher: Journal of Nursing and Midwifery Sciences with great pleasure and expectation. I would like to give a very warm welcome to the readership of Nursearcher on behalf of the editorial team. I would want to take this opportunity to thank our authors, editors, and reviewers who have all contributed their time to help the launching of the journal succeed.

The topics covered in the journal but not limited to: nursing education, community nursing, specialist nursing topics, policies in nursing and health care, ethical issues, health care systems, health care management, pediatrics nursing, palliative care and taking care of elderly population, simulations and skill labs in nursing, first aid, handling of emergency cases, nursing role in COVID-19 and other infectious diseases, family planning, birth control, gynaecology and related disciplines.

Since many real-world problems are complex in nature, we especially appreciate submissions that adopt a multidisciplinary/convergent approach and can demonstrate near-term practical usefulness. Nursearcher provides a valuable forum for the exchange of information on all of the aforementioned subjects and more, in a variety of formats, including full-length original articles, review articles, case reports, systematic reviews, meta-analysis, case series, short commentaries, opinion articles and letter to editors.

I close this message by inviting everyone to submit their intriguing research to Nursearcher. We are therefore devoted to disseminating all findings, techniques, tools, and reviews that materially enhance the study of nursing. Once more, let me extend a warm welcome to this journal—your journal! I anticipate highly promising prospects for Nursearcher to serve science and the scientific community even better with your help as authors, reviewers, and editors. In the long run, we will enhance more lives and, as a result, our communities.

We hope to hear from you soon, and we welcome your feedback!
